

COIL

AMERICAN FOREIGN POLICY TO LATINOAMERICA

Faculty members

- We particularly found very important to see Mexican and U.S. students working together in groups to complete a poster presentation
- it was a unique learning experience for them.
- But COIL was also a unique experience for the faculty members involved: Ivanni and I worked in cooperation in our weekly assignments, selection of materials, grading and solving problems that emerged during the program.

Students

- it is a good experience for our students to expose them to different perspectives on international politics and U.S. Foreign Policy in our case.
- By connecting to each other on a weekly basis, students had the opportunity to learn more from each country, our societies, and our universities

Importance

- Internacionalization at home
- Bulding links in the future
- Innovation
- Promoting multiculturalism

“I am glad that our partnership will continue when the SUNY Fredonia group will arrive in Monterrey in May for the study trip in company of UDEM students and faculty members. In sum, as a first experience, I see it positive to increase learning in a multicultural event, and hope to have the opportunity to continue my involvement in COIL activities”
